Perfection is in the Details at Art For Everyday

By Sharon Aschaiek

Timeless creations, lovingly crafted with a meticulous attention to detail, and designed to invoke the classical styles of history's greatest artistic epochs: this is what lies at the heart of Art For Everyday, a modern woodcarving company steeped in old-world stylistic ethos.

From the flamboyant, florid flourishes of the Renaissance, to the bold, dramatic and complex styles of the Baroque period, to the sporty, imaginative and whimsical character of the Rococo age – these are the eras to which master carvers at Art For Everyday turn for inspiration to create original and highly detailed works of art.

Building on extensive professional training, decades worth of industry knowledge and expertise, and innate creative talent, these master carvers take pride in their craftsmanship, and are widely recognized for their incredible attention to detail and unerring accuracy. It is this outstanding talent, the company's strong client-oriented approach, and the bold vision and commitment to excellence embraced by the company's partners, that have driven the remarkable success of this Woodbridge, Ontario-based company.

Since first opening its doors in 1998, Art for Everyday has quickly evolved into an internationally recognized, premier wood carving company.

From developing a new design concept, to creating a prototype, to filling a client's order, all work is done on the premises, allowing the company's principals to oversee the entire operation and ensure the highest standards of quality are met.

These high standards extend to the fine, exotic and domestic woods the company uses, which include nine core species such as Mahogany, Cherry, Maple and Pine, and rarer species imported from Africa and South America to accommodate special requests, such as Jatoba, Ebony and Zebra wood.

Art For Everyday's extensive inventory features 450 products in 12 different categories, including corbels, mantels, appliques and rosettes. The company adds 60 to 70 new products to its lineup each year, guaranteeing customers a diverse range of quality products.

Driven by a commitment to innovation, the company's principals attend several industry trade shows each, and travel extensively throughout Europe in search of new ideas. They also regularly draw inspiration from the artistic geniuses who made their marks between the 14th and 19th centuries, especially Bernini and Michaelangelo.

Art For Everyday is just as dedicated to the art and science of fine woodworking as it is to the customers it serves, and goes out of its way to accommodate all requests, big or small. The company adheres to an exceptional delivery standard of seven to 10 days for 95% of products – significantly more expedient than the industry standard of six to eight weeks. The company also accommodates requests for customized products, and will collaborate with clients to ensure their exact specifications are met. Combine this with highly competitive pricing, and it's no wonder Art For Everyday has been able to attract a large and loyal base of clients.

More than 1,500 small- to large-sized businesses – most from the kitchen design industry, but also interior design and architect firms – turn to Art For Everyday each year for their woodcarving needs. The company ships merchandise to clients all across Canada, the U.S. and Europe.

Corner posts

A close-up photograph of a wooden corner post, which is a decorative element used in bookbinding. The post is carved into the shape of a human face, with visible features like eyes, a nose, and a mouth. It is resting on a wooden surface. In the background, a wooden pencil and a pair of glasses are visible, adding to the artistic and craft-oriented theme of the image.
